

EXPERIENCE

Charles Stec is an attorney at Weil & Drage ("W&D") with a wide range of construction litigation experience, including but not limited to the representation of contractors, design professionals, and property owners in a variety of matters, including litigation, collections, and professional licensing. Additionally, Charles is a licensed California general building contractor with over 15 years of construction experience, including extensive experience with roofing and water intrusion issues in both public and private projects. This unique background allows him to see beyond the legal implications and to understand the unique needs of construction professionals from a hands-on perspective.

Charles is licensed and practices in all courts in the State of California.
